The Censorship

Prime Minister Chamberlain announced that the British censor will relax the regulations to the point of giving out authentic news about the war, good or bad. The Canadian censorship, it is to be supposed, will operate on the same lines. Canadians are not children who must be buoyed up by fairy tales or kept from knowing when a reverse is sustained.

In the last war enlistments in Canada went up sharply every time the Allies met with a disaster. The same result will follow in the present war. Since enlistment is to be voluntary, it is more than otherwise advisable to let the public know the facts, particularly when these are not pleasant. The more apparent the need, the faster Canada's army will grow.

On A Cash Basis

The principle underlying the new taxes is that Canada should so far as possible finance the war on a pay-as-you-go basis. Since the alternative is to borrow, or to inflate the money supply on a scale that would necessitate a revolutionary war-time reconstruction of the whole monetary mechanism, the principle is a sound one.

The last war left a legacy of debt which we have not as yet made headway in clearing off. The nearer we can come to financing for this war out of current revenue, the less worry we shall have to endure when it is over. And experience has shown very convincingly that it is easier to pay in war-time than in post-war time.

It is more important that this principle be adhered to as far as possible, because no one can guess how long the war will last or what the total cost will run to. Britain and France are making plans on the supposition that it may last three years or even longer. In that event, it will be prudent to get along without borrowing as long as this can be done, conserving our national credit for the final, and no doubt more costly, stages of the struggle.

There is the added consideration that if the country is to put its maximum effort into the war capital will be required to expand the facilities for production of supplies and munitions of all kinds. If the Government keeps out of the market, agriculture, industry and business will be able to obtain this needed capital more easily and at lower rates of interest, will particularly in the event of a long war, will be one of the decisive factors in determining how much economic weight Canada can throw into the scales.

Everybody Pays

No person is exempted in the list of war taxes. The new levies on tea, coffee, liquors, tobacco, electric light bills and gas bills, smoked meat and canned fish cover a good deal of ground and will tap practically every pocket directly or indirectly. A 20 per cent boost in personal income taxes will affect single persons having incomes of $1,500 per year and over and married persons with incomes of $2,000 or more.

While the incidence is universal, the taxes affecting individuals are imposed chiefly on luxuries. The rate cannot be said to be excessive. Five cents a pound on tobacco, five to ten cents on tea, and ten cents on coffee will not cause many to forego their pipe or cup. Applying the eight per cent sales tax to light and gas bills will catch all consumers, but the levy will not be serious on small accounts. The increases in liquor taxes look more formidable. The 20 per cent surtax on incomes will work no hardship.

Business concerns do not get off so easily. The corporation income tax goes up 3 per cent. And companies, if more than half the extra profits must be turned in to the treasury; besides the risk of being rounded up and fined by the price control board.

If this is not conscripting wealth it is conscripting profits on a scale not previously attempted. The quite obvious object is to discourage price-boasting. Gouging will hardly be the worst while since more than half the extra profits must be turned in to the treasury; besides the risk of being rounded up and fined by the price control board.

Canada's Job

Canada's "plunge" into Hitler's war is to be less spectacular than its entry into the war of twenty-five years ago. For the reason that this war is different—different in the immediate objective and therefore in the methods which must be adopted. When the German armies swept through Belgium into northern France, the immediate need was for men to fight the rush. The fighting was in open country, with no permanent fortifications to check the enemy, and only sheer weight of numbers could halt the advance. Hence in Canada, as in Britain and the other Dominions, there was haste to recruit great expeditionary forces and get them into France with the least possible delay.

This time the Allies are on the attack. And they are attacking on a limited front, a line of fortifications built without regard to expense to stop just such an attack. The Siegfried line is not a string of open trenches or hastily improvised defences, to be broken through by a sudden "push". There is a limit to the number of men who can be employed in the undertaking, and they will have to expertly directed, expertly led, and trained and armed to the last word.

Wherever Canadian troops may be employed in future, the coming months will have to be spent in preparation so far as Canada is concerned. We have to build up an army, as well trained as the Canadian forces in the last war, trained after spending months in England, and equipped as there is not at present either in Canada or in England arms with which to equip them.

This does not mean that Canada's part is to be an easy part, or that recruiting is less urgent than before. We must, fortunately, that there is time to pick recruits with strict regard to physical fitness, to arm them with the best of weapons, and to teach them the technicalities of fighting under the new conditions. If an expeditionary force is required later, it will be composed of men who have been given the best possible opportunity to learn how this different kind of a war has to be fought.

Editorial Notes

Officials at Berlin boast that they are waiting for Poland to raise the white flag. If the fall rains come at the usual time and in the usual volume, they will have long to wait. With their motorized tanks stuck in Poland mud it would be the invaders who needed white flags.

The National Railways want $30,000,000, mainly to build box cars. It is explained a larger supply is needed because the bulk of western war-time crops will have to be sent out by the Atlantic coast. That will not be pleasing news to Alberta farmers or Vancouver grain interests. But with enemy submarines abroad, wheat will have to be shipped by the shortest water route available, and conveyed by warships as well.

The Passing Show

By J. S. COWPER

Operating anti-Jewish propaganda organizations appear to be a lucrative business. The Special House Committee on Un-American Activities, now sitting at Washington, has been probing the Silver Shirts of America—one of the most active of anti-Jewish organizations. They report that the head of the organization, William Dudley Pelley, has diverted to his personal account more than $100,000 received by the Silver Shirts organization from membership dues, gifts and profits from the sale of anti-Jewish literature.

It is more profitable, evidently, to be a per-se Hitler and wear a Silver Shirt than to dirty a working shirt. Most of these anti-organizations are racketeers, operated for the personal profit of promoters. In addition to the diversified funds, Pelley has the profits from a huge printing plant housed in an $80,000 building, that publishes anti-Jewish propaganda. Among those who made gifts of cash to Pelley to carry on the work is George B. Fisher, who donated $4,600 in 1938 and $10,000 in 1939. Mr. Fisher is a stockholder in the Crowell Publishing Company which publishes magazines for women. He manages the pattern department for them.

On the other hand, money is not an unmitigated blessing in itself. A contented mind is better than riches. For my part I prefer the wisdom of Buddha—as rich as he was—who uttered the teaching five centuries before the birth of Christ.

Whoever who wishes to attain to the joy of living in harmony with the universe shall receive no one, entertain no hatred for anyone and no wish to injure through anger."

Listening in on the radio to police calls to prowler cars, one hears numerous instructions to officers to investigate prowlers and loiterers. Nervous housewives get panicky when they see strangers pacing the streets at night. The Chicago police the other night acted upon a report that a strange man was prowling the grounds of St. Francis Hospital. A couple of cops in a prowler car sped to the grounds and found Arnold Balzeron. At the police station, Mr. Balzeron had a satisfactory answer for his conduct. Nervous and work, he explained, he had been walking the halls and grounds of the hospital while awaiting the work. It turned out he was a policeman in his own home town. Even policemen get worried at a like that.

By the time his brother cops delivered him back at the hospital, the welcome news came that it was a fine boy, and mother and son were doing well.

In view of the clash of arms in Europe, Count Puckler's book, "The Strong is Britain," is a timely contribution. It is a well-written, well-illustrated, well-informed book for some time London correspondent of the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung.

Germany there has been a Nazi assessment of Britain's readiness to interpret the League of Nations' decision to recognize weakness. Even today on this continent many Germans find it difficult to believe that Britain is at present in her intention to fight till Nazi tyranny and threat are overthrown. They think that once Germany has over-run Poland, Britain will accept the situation as one not worth further fighting for. That is the theory Hitler holds—and every loyal German heart is supposed to believe as the Fuehrer does.

Count Puckler warns his countrymen against accepting the German view. Britain is in no mood to maintain a prolonged war because she has shown readiness to compromise. Striking a balance on the many aspects of strength discussed the author thinks Great Britain's economic strength is almost as great today as it was when she entered the World War in 1914. He thinks she is better equipped for military preparation than she was then. Says he, "Great Britain has command of the sea and she is a naval power." In modern history she has never been defeated by force of arms. By 1914-15 the book was published before the Polish crisis broke, she will stand before the world powerfully armed indeed."

An implied tribute to British ethical conduct is contained in Count Puckler's book. He writes: "British labor under the handicap that her war power can only be sent into action for political aims that are ethical in the eyes of the world. But, he adds, "On the other hand, it follows from the moral check on Great Britain has anything to fear from her, no matter how strong she might be, providing her own foreign policy is as strictly ethical as Britain's by circumstances is compelled to be."

Boy! Page de Fumher with a copy of "How Strong is Britain." It is written by one of his own kind, young men. It is a book that might well have pondered over before plunging Europe into war.

Religion Day By Day

By WILLIAM T. ELLIS

FUTURE ARTISTS Almost daily there go to the Lake of Galilee artists and photographers, who would carry away records of its beauty, they take in vain; for no brush or pencil or lens can transmit the ineffable beauty of this lake and of these islands. And artists in the superlative degree, and man cannot equal Him.

It is well that "A man reach should exceed his grasp. Else whence a heaven for?" Life is full of unattainable glories; but man will forever strive after them, to the growth of his spirit. We reach out after them all before us, and keep on reaching until, with unlimited powers, we attain satisfaction in heaven. Then only shall we be satisfied.

There has set eternity in our hearts, O God, to stimulate our striving after the life of God. We never reach our high endeavors. Amen. Read 1 Corinthians 2:1-16.

Dynastic Record Broken

The King of Sweden on Friday has become the oldest King of Swedish history. Previously that position had been held by his great-grandfather, King Charles XIV. John, one of Napoleon's marshals and founder of the Bernadotte dynasty in Sweden, who died in 1844 at the age of 81 years and 42 days. King Gustaf passed that age July 23 while playing lawn tennis at a seaside resort in Southern Sweden—London Times.

The Dominions

These days have brought a reaffirmation of the unity of the component parts of the British Commonwealth of Nations. Thousands of miles have been erased, with resulting abundant evidence that their elevation to the stature of independent nations has not impaired in any degree their loyalty to England, Canada, South Africa, Australia and New Zealand. No longer is it strictly true that "when England is at war we are at war" for the course of each and every event of war will be determined by itself. But it is undoubtedly true today that, if war comes, each would do its full part as simply a member of "The British Empire."

In 1914 there was a belief in Berlin amounting almost to conviction that the British Empire was brittle. It was quickly shattered, and soon this lament and confession appeared in Germany:

We expected that British India would rise from the first shot as was first in Europe, but in fact thousands of Indians came to fight with the British against us. We anticipated that the British Empire would be torn to pieces, but the colonies appear to be united closer than ever with the mother country. We expected a triumphant rebellion in South Africa. But the Boers fought for us.

Germany's disappointment over the refusal of the British Empire to collapse is quite understandable. India, by the way, has raised 525,000 men. Australia, with a population of 7,000,000, sent 330,000 men and incurred a debt of $2,000,000,000. New Zealand, with 1,000,000 people, sent 100,000 men and incurred a debt of $400,000,000. New Zealand had 30,000 casualties and only 341 of her men were killed. In 1914, 50,000 British troops were sent for her individual war with Germany. India sent 600,000 fighters to aid the Empire. Altogether, of nearly 10,000,000 British troops, British flag, in all capacities, 3,383,000 men from overseas.

Today, theoretically, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa are responsible for their own defense. Yet they all recognize that they must "hang together or hang separately." And they are making their own way for their own defense and for co-operation. Their individual participation in a war in Europe would be determined by their own position on the globe and farther from "home" than it is. It now has a three-year defense program calling for more than $200,000,000. For Canada, the "Far East," the "Near North." Canada, New Zealand and South Africa are similarly preparing. That England is not worried by India is shown by her dispatch of thousands of soldiers from that country to Singapore and to other parts of the world. The small group of Federated Malay States has contributed more than $100,000,000 for the defense of the Empire. Germany today, it would seem, has lost her misalliance of 1914—New York Times.

Unless the exigencies of war prevent, Canada today pay a long neglected debt to a great Canadian singer, Madame Albani-Gye. Marie Emma Lajeunesse was born in the village of Chibougamou, in the province of Quebec, on May 1, 1850. She died in 1939, having been in the interval one of the world's most famous prima donnas. Her great talent for music was discovered by the cure of her parish, who took her to Montreal, where she received training. A skillful pianist and organist, her destiny as a singer was not foreseen, but soon after her 17th year her voice developed and she made her first appearance in concert given in 1869 in the role of the Prince of Wales.

Her success was immediate for her young. Soon afterwards she (like so many other Canadians) finding little scope for her talent at home, went to the United States.

She began her career as a soprano in the Roman Catholic Cathedral in Albany, N.Y. (hence her stage name). From there she went to Paris where she met with Gilbert Dupre, a famous tenor and vocal teacher who created the title role in Berlioz's "Benvenuto Cellini." Madame Albani's second teacher was Francesco Lamperti, probably one of the greatest masters of Italian voice-teaching who ever lived. Besides the Canadian soprano he also taught Italo Campanini, Caruso's first teacher, and Enrico Marcella Sembrich, the great Polish soprano who died in New York City some years ago.

Madame Albani made her debut as an operatic singer at the opera house in Messina, Sicily, in 1870, changing her name from Lajeunesse to Albani at the suggestion of her manager. She was extraordinarily versatile in the range of roles she had at her command. She could sing the chorale music of Donizetti's Lucia and the heroic music of Wagner's Isolde with equal facility and success. She and Jean de Reszke were one of the favorite operatic teams of what Her Majesty's "old glories" in the age of opera.

The soprano married Ernest Gye, a house of the Covent Garden Theatre and a noted opera singer in London, who predeceased her by several years. In 1911, Madame Albani published her autobiography under the title of "Forty Years of Song." She lived in retirement many years before her death, having been created a Dame of the British Empire by King George V.

The tribute to her at her birthplace, Chibougamou, was a pleasure to her and to her son, Ernest Gye, who has come to Canada for the purpose. The bronze tablet has been provided by the Hon. J. C. Macdonald of Quebec, and the Hon. E. P. Brien, who will preside at the ceremony.

"Would you have your udder look for a white shoe with a black toe and heel?"

Your Health—By Dr. Frank McCoy

Rice growing in America is said to have gotten its start from a shipwreck. The story goes that in 1684 a ship, wrecked at sea put in at Charleston, South Carolina. The captain gave his crew a rough rice to eat, and it was so good that it was planted and was a great success. Thus began the rice-growing industry in America.

Rice is a very nourishing, containing about 75 percent starch, is easily digested and is almost entirely assimilated. It is classed with the "good" starches and advise its use when ever a starchy food is desired.

Our ordinary form of rice is the white rice, which is sold with a harmless coating of corn starch, and the coating being used to add to the luster of the rice grains and give them a pleasing appearance. The coating easily washes off.

Brown rice refers to the whole grain, from which only the outer hull has been removed. The brown hull is a better source of vitamins and in addition provides such food minerals as calcium, phosphorus, iron and magnesium. The vitamins and minerals are found in the rice-grain. In the outer layers. In the case of the white rice, these are removed, at least in some of the day's rice remain. However, if it is left to use the white rice, it is all right in providing you with plenty of vegetables which will supply the missing element. The missing element need not be used at the same meal necessarily, but may be used at some other time of the day.

While there are many ways of preparing boiled rice, the following is a good method. Wash the rice in several waters, or wash it in running water. When cooking, use plenty without a double boiler, use plenty of water. Add the rice slowly, so as not to stir the boiling. The boiling water should have already been added. Boil rapidly without stirring until the grains are soft. It will be in the case of 20 to 30 minutes, brown rice is ready to eat. Drain off the water and steam until the rice is dry. This method of cooking will provide a fluffy, fluffy, as each grain will be separate.

When cooking rice in a double boiler, use plenty of water. Boiling water is about the right proportion. Brown rice has the advantage of preserving a richer flavor when the rice is reheated.

Ltd. Everything in Lumber, Brass and Hardware 12 St. and Jasper Ph. 20248	Rabbi J. Eisen Issues Message For New Year A beautiful tradition has been handed down to us concerning the festival of Rosh Hashanah—the New Year. We are told that it marks the birth, the creation of the first man and the first woman upon this universe. "It was on Rosh Hashanah in the first hour of that day, that the thought came to God to create Adam—Man-kind." We celebrate today, according to this tradition, the birthday, not of the father of the Jewish people alone, but of the father of all humanity. With this picture and thought imbedded in my mind, I join my people in wishing you, whoever you may be, a year of blessing and prosperity. A year of peace and contentment, of joy and of spiritual welfare. Jacob J. Eisen, Rabbi. Congregation Beth Shalom, Edmonton.	Rabbi I. Haft Greets Friends At New Year The Jewish people are now experiencing one of the most significant epochs in their history. In the course of 1888 years since the destruction of the Temple, the Jews have withstood unspeakable persecutions. The fact that we were once a people living in our own land and the creators of an outstanding culture was ignored or forgotten—we were the victims of the Jews in every field of human endeavor ever fully appreciated. However, in our days we see the resurrection and rehabilitation of these ancient people through the initiative of the British Government and it is now generally recognized that the land of Israel must be restored to the sons of Israel or at least to a part of them. On the eve of this New Year, let us hope and pray that the nations of the world will enable us to realize our ancient and cherished dream and that all sorrow and tragedy will disappear from the face of the earth. Rabbi I.
